

BUSINESS AS USUAL AT WARE & KAY SOLICITORS

The Government has announced that people over a certain age with pre-existing medical conditions are to self-isolate. This will mean you are unable to venture out, go to the shops, the bank or pay bills. For those that have put Powers of Attorney in place, now might be a good time for those you have appointed as Attorneys, to start helping you.

If you have not already had a Power of Attorney prepared it would be sensible to consider putting this in place.

We also understand clients will be concerned and may wish to make sure their affairs are in order.

Therefore, whether you would like to update your existing Will or make one for the first time please speak to one of our experienced team who will be able to help.

Whilst we are in uncertain times, we wish to reassure clients that we are operating on a 'business as usual' approach with minimum disruption to our service.

Although our offices are closed to clients we are still open for business by telephone and email during normal working hours. Our staff are mostly working from home but we have established areas at our offices for safe exchange and signing of documents.
